Data from S&P Global Commodities at Sea showed that West African imports of clean refined products dropped to 765,000 barrels per day in May from 997,000 barrels per day in April, representing a 23 per cent decline. Shipping association BIMCO was quoted as saying that West African imports of clean refined products fell significantly within a month as the 650,000-barrel-per-day refinery in Nigeria expanded output and displaced imported volumes across the region.
