Currencies

Global Currencies

Last week began with the U.S. Dollar trading near multi-month highs, after stronger-than-expected U.S. economic data reinforced expectations that the Federal Reserve would keep interest rates elevated. Higher interest rates generally attract foreign capital into dollar-denominated assets because investors can earn higher yields. This widening interest-rate advantage over other developed economies supported the dollar against most major currencies, particularly the Japanese yen.

A major turning point came when reports emerged that the United States and Iran had reached a preliminary peace framework that could end hostilities, reopen the Strait of Hormuz, and restore oil flows. Financial markets interpreted the development as a reduction in geopolitical risk. Investors who had previously sought the safety of the U.S. Dollar began moving capital into higher-risk assets and other currencies. As a result, the dollar index fell to its lowest level in ten days. The U.S. Dollar Index declined by 31bps wow, to close Friday at 99.75pts, demonstrating how quickly geopolitical developments can influence foreign-exchange markets.

The Euro was one of the main beneficiaries of the dollar's retreat as risk sentiment improved and investors reduced their safe-haven positions. The move was mainly driven by broad dollar weakness and not by improvements in European economic news. Currency traders viewed the easing of geopolitical tensions as positive for global trade and economic activity, which supported demand for the Euro and other major currencies.

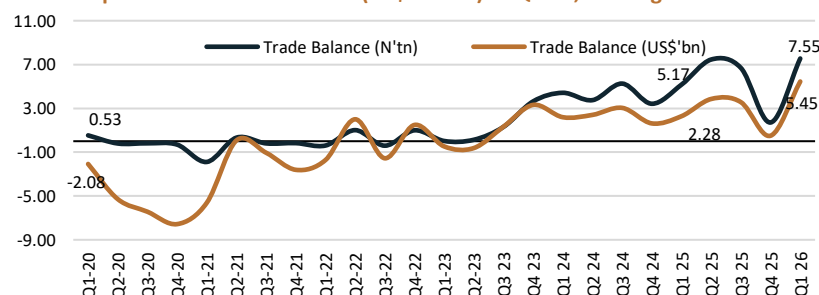

Nigeria – NGN

Last week, at the NFEM window, the Naira depreciated against the US Dollar by 12bps wow to close at N1,363.82/US, dragging its YTD appreciation to 5.27%. Meanwhile, Nigeria's foreign reserves grew 0.62% to close at US$50.43bn as of 10th June 2026. According to the National Bureau of Statistics (NBS), total foreign trade fell by 6.47% yoy to 34.79tn in Q1-26. However, due to the USD/NGN appreciation of 9.9% in Q1-26, total trade fell by 1.7% yoy to US$25.12bn. Notably, the decline in total trade was due to an 18.1% yoy decline in total imports despite the 2.8% increase in total exports. This resulted in a trade surplus balance of N7.55tn. In our view, the strengthening trade surplus directly supports the current account, reducing Nigeria's dependence on capital inflows to support the USD/NGN stability in the near term.

Ghana – GHS

The Ghanaian Cedi appreciated by 658bps wow against the US Dollar to close at 11.10 Cedi/US$, driving its YTD depreciation to -5.41%.

Trade surplus widened to N7.55trn (US$5.45bn) in Q1-26, the largest since 2020

Fixed Income

Nigeria LCY

Last week, the OPR rate remained flat at 22.00%, while the O/N rate gained 6bps w/w to close at 22.16%. Average daily system liquidity decreased by 169bps w/w to N4.71tn. The Nigerian Overnight Financing Rate (NOFR) remained flat to close at 22.00%.

Last week, CBN conducted an OMO auction on 8 June, 2026, offering N600bn split evenly across the 8-day and 134-day instruments. Investor sentiment was skewed towards the long-dated instrument as the 134-day paper recorded an oversubscription of 5.35x with subscription printing at N1.61tn. Conversely, the 8-day instrument was undersubscribed with a bid-to-offer ratio of 0.28x. Overall, the apex bank allotted the total amount subscribed (N1.69tn) with average stop rate printing at 20.96%

In the secondary fixed income market, the average benchmark bond yield increased w/w to close at 16.41%. In addition, average benchmark OMO yield expanded by 82bps w/w to close at 20.78%, while the average benchmark NTB yield expanded by 117bps to close at 17.88%.

Looking forward, the OMO maturities of N711.10bn this week is expected to boost system liquidity. This liquidity injection could support stronger demand, especially at the short end, and place mild downward pressure on yields, depending on the CBN's liquidity management actions. We also look forward to the NTB auction which will provide insight into investor demand and rate expectations. However, attention will be on the upcoming inflation release, as any upside surprise could reinforce hawkish policy expectations and limit the scope for yield compression. Overall, the interplay between liquidity inflows and inflation data will be critical in guiding near-term market direction.

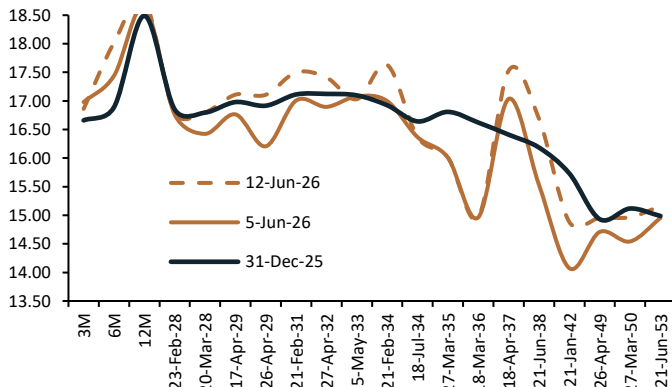

Ghana LCY

Last week, the Ghanaian yield curve expanded by 5bps w/w to close at 10.56%, driven largely by selling sentiments across the curve. Last week, at the latest Treasury bill auction, the government attracted only GHS8.44tn in bids. Eventually, GHS8.30tn was allotted with average interest rate expanding by 78bps to 7.70%.

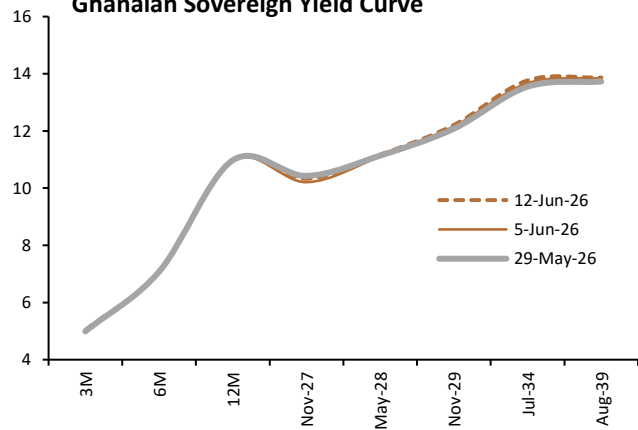

SSA Eurobonds

In the SSA Eurobond market last week, average yields expanded by 20bps w/w to close at 12.20% due to selling sentiments across select markets. The strongest selling sentiment was observed in Nigeria, where yields rose by 91bps, followed by Egypt (+42bps), Zambia (+30bps), Congo (+17bps), Angola (+8bps), Ivory Coast (+5bps), Ghana (+3bps), Kenya (+2bps) and Senegal (+1bp). Notably, there was also buying sentiments in South Africa (-1bp).

The CBN released proposed revisions to the Financial Holding Company (FHC) last week. These guidelines are expected to strengthen governance, capital adequacy, and regulatory oversight across banking groups. Key changes include enhanced capital requirements for HoldCos, stricter ownership and control provisions, clearer eligibility criteria for promoters, and tighter regulation of shared services arrangements. The guidelines also permit HoldCos to directly hold foreign subsidiaries, simplifying group structures and improving operational efficiency. Overall, the reforms should enhance financial stability, reduce contagion risks within banking groups, and support a more resilient banking sector as institutions continue to expand and diversify their operations.

CBN proposes revision to financial Holdco guidelines: key proposed changes

	Revised Area	Key Provision
1	Strengthening Capital Requirements	The holdco must maintain minimum regulatory capital exceeding the aggregate minimum regulatory capital of its subsidiaries by at least 20%. Only paid-in capital (paid-up capital plus share premium) is recognised, and excess capital in one subsidiary cannot cover a shortfall in another.
2	Regulation of Shared Services	Shared services to group members (facilities, legal, ICT) require prior CBN approval, must be at arm's length and consented to by both boards. A value-for-money audit is required at least every two years, with quarterly returns to the CBN.
3	Eligibility Criteria for Promoters	Clear eligibility requirements introduced for promoters (individuals, non-bank corporates, or a bank). A bank promoter must not have a recent "Above Average" or "High" composite risk rating and must demonstrate sound financial position and good governance.
4	Organisational Structure	FHCs, rather than their Nigerian banking subsidiaries, may directly hold equity in foreign subsidiaries through an intermediate holdco. A maximum of two hierarchies (parent and intermediate holdco) is permitted with CBN approval.
5	Ownership and Control Requirements	The FHC must hold a minimum of 51% equity stake in each subsidiary and be registered as a person with significant control (PSC) at the Corporate Affairs Commission or other relevant authority.

Ghana

Last week, the GSE Composite Index gained 1.00% wow to close at 14,442.02pts from 14,299.32pts, driving MTD performance to +0.61% and YTD return to 64.67% from 63.04% the prior week. The gains in the market was largely driven by gains in ETI, CLYD and CPC, which weighed on the broader market during the week.

Similarly, market capitalisation rose by 3.90% wow to GHS275,718.44mn, with MTD and YTD returns of +4.15% and 60.26%, respectively. In USD terms, market capitalisation gained +10.71% wow to USD24,839.50mn, translating to an MTD return of +9.98% and YTD return of +51.60%.

The Financial Sector Index performed better than the broader market, expanding by 4.00% wow to 8,227.71pts from 7,911.44pts. The expansion translated to a MTD return of +4.77% driving YTD performance to 77.05% from 70.24% the prior week.

Trading activity improved during the week, with both market volume and value increasing. Total volume increased by 67.51% wow to 18.40mn units, while value traded increased by 80.02% wow to GHS163.25mn from GHS90.69mn. This suggests that trading activity was concentrated in higher-priced counters, where the total value of transactions increased disproportionately relative to the number of shares traded.

The GSE recorded nine gainers in the week ended 12 June 2026.
